PEOPLE & PORTRAITS

UNIVERSITY OF UTAH
Donn Schaefer

Dave Titensor/Photographer

“The image I selected for Judges Choice was the portrait of Don Schaefer submitted by the University of Utah; it was unique, unexpected and the B&W approach helped it stand out. If Don is a prof, I want to take his class, if he is a staff member, I want to be his co-worker. Good images can elicit that type of response.”

“I felt that these photographs established an intimate sense of place and communicated the experience of exploring this beautiful natural environment with fellow students. The images, created by students, are of top-notch professional quality and I felt that they needed to be recognized as such.”

"This image really spoke to me. I kept coming back to it. I don't know if it just resonated with me because of how this whole 2 years have felt (like the feeling of being underwater and navigating through difficulty or surrender and release (which is what the subject in the image is doing.) It was beautifully executed and the image was stirring and moving and called on me to choose it.

Excellent illustrations. Layout complex but handled very well."

MARK SABA
 ILLUSTRATOR

SUNNY PAULK
 ARTIST/DESIGNER

This stood out to me for its complexity and level of technical skill. The variation of line weights in the intricate details, as well as the soft earthen tones, give the creatures an "old world" feel of both magic and whimsy. These are simply masterful illustrations and would be delighted to meet any of these creatures!

“Beautifully executed. Orange spiral bound has whimsical feeling. The modular geometric periscope icon is clever and I love the “easter eggs” in some of the lenses and throughout the book Engaging illustrations and layout.”.

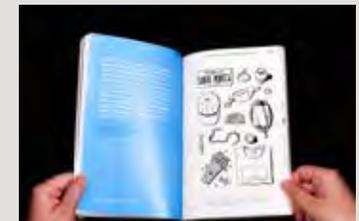

“I really appreciated the attention to detail on the work created by the students from University of Arkansas for their printed piece: Periscope. Every design choice fed into the overall coherency of the finished product which was sleek and polished. It excelled to pro-level.”.

“I like how this project honors the work of street vendors, an occupation that’s often overlooked or taken for granted. It also embraces and celebrates a sense of place, neighborhood and local culture. It informs and educates while being playful. It can function as a coloring book or a color by number book for people of all ages. It looks like postcards are part of the project too - it seems like a multi-part package. The line drawings are fresh and open, the typography is rather straightforward and draws you into the story with a kind of brightness that seems appropriate for LA. Overall, it looks like a lovingly put together, respectful project about place, culture and people.”

*F*ck It Won't Cut It - BU's Student COVID Campaign*

"This campaign created "for students, by students" begins with a playful, yet on-point YouTube video explaining the campaign's origins and multi-faceted implementation strategy. The copy for the campaign is both attention-grabbing and completely authentic to its target audience — which is probably due in large part to the fact that the creators of this campaign are of that audience. The design perfectly aligns with the "in-your-face" tone of the campaign, while also possessing a sophistication and high-level of execution that continually engages the viewer and driving the message home. My congratulations to the student creators of this campaign and to the University to taking a chance on putting something truly memorable out there. Now I'm going to go wash my mouth out with soap. Or maybe not. F*ck it."

COURTNEY WINDHAM
 AUBURN UNIVERSITY

"I selected Boston University's in-house portfolio which includes an impressive collection of work. In terms of print pieces, it features an extensive "Back 2 BU" poster series and a stunning, multi-layered Annual/Donor Report for the School of Public Health. The depth of these pieces—from content to use of type, image, and illustration—are incredible and inspiring on many levels. Most comprehensive, consistent work that is well designed and very aware of the timely and important subject matter of 2020-21; The poster series is handled really well; the annual/donor report is stunning, and the 2020 Year in Review piece is very unique, well-design, forward thinking piece in its delivery (even though it is digital)."

"I really appreciated the thoughtful and extremely well designed content of the NYU Langone Health magazine. The design felt consistent, intelligent and the illustrations and infographics felt well conceived. The density of the content only highlights the challenge on hand, and it's execution felt very effective."
